

CHILLING TALES

October 31 (Sat) 7:30 p.m.
Seattle Open Arts Place 1406 18th Ave, Seattle, WA 98122

Listen to well-crafted stories come alive!

International storyteller Larry Hohm returns to S.O.A.P to tell gripping tales of murder and mystery, and sometimes clever humor - stories with an edge, written by accomplished authors.

These are not readings - the stories are told from memory with drama and passion. The evening will include a humorous story by Colin Nissan, a thriller by Bill Pronzini, and an eerie tale of suspense by Shirley Jackson.

Tickets are choose-your-own-price: $10, $15, $20, $25, $30, $50.

Phantom of the Pipes

Join us for a frightfully delightful evening of ghost stories and organ music! Let master storyteller Geoff Poor transport you into a shadow world of ghosts and ghouls through gripping recitations of spooky stories, culminating in Edgar Allan Poe's monumental poem "The Raven."

Organist Susanna Valleau, maestro of music macabre, will unleash a wave of eerie, sinister music on the pipes, ending, of course, with Bach's famous - iconic - infamous! - Toccata and Fugue in D Minor.

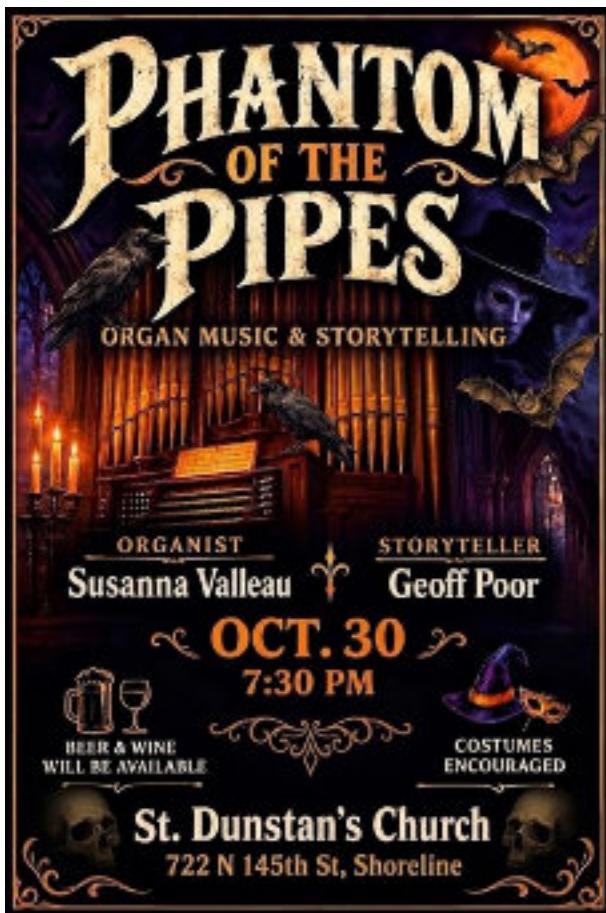

Costumes are encouraged! Seasonal treats and prizes for best costume will be shared after the concert, and alcoholic beverages will be available for purchase.

Mary Anne Moorman, also known as “Auntmama,” tells personal stories that come from her roots growing up in the Appalachian Mountains of Virginia, from life in her Northwest home, and points along the way. Building community through her stories, she is committed to multicultural diversity and bringing generations together. A longtime member of the Seattle Story-tellers Guild, and a past President, she is a Golden Circle honoree. She was designated as a “Living Legacy” by Seattle Arts & Culture in 2019.

Mary Anne co-hosts “Sunday Folks”, a three hour Americana show of acoustic folk music airing alternate Sundays on KBCS FM 91.3. “Auntmama” has created a performance venue, Stage 3, which she converted from a barn on her property in Kingston, WA. She and the other “Aunties” are presently reviving Auntmama’s Storytable at Common Objects on 1st Ave in Seattle.

Ingrid Nixon

is an award-winning, world-traveling storyteller who whisks listeners away on journeys of the imagination. Exploration nail-biters, tall tales, traditional and personal stories—she tells them all on international expeditions from Antarctica to Greenland, Madagascar to Easter Island and, soon, New Zealand.

Retired from the National Park Service, Ingrid’s three decades of work in expedition tourism has taken her on a magic carpet ride around the planet, and currently to festivals around the country, including recently the National Storytelling Festival and the Forest Storytelling Festival. She is a champion liar many times over and – no lie – holds a Masters in Storytelling from East Tennessee State University. She hails from Alaska. Ingrid produces/hosts Story Borealis for NPR affiliate KBBI Public Radio in Homer, Alaska – available on the web.
